

Why choose an accredited general practice? Because your health and safety matter

Accreditation means that the general practice has been checked by an independent group to make sure it gives safe, quality care and follows the national health standards.

Why it matters to you?

Wherever you are in Australia, visiting an accredited general practice means you can expect it to have processes in place to provide you and your community with safe and quality care.

Accreditation helps general practices create safe and respectful environments for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples. It aims to support safety at every stage of the health journey.

1

Access and safe environment

- ✓ Private and safe information
- ✓ Access for everyone
- ✓ Trained staff

2

Safe and quality care

- ✓ Equipment is kept in good condition
- ✓ Informed consent is discussed
- ✓ Medicine is stored safely

3

Respectful and open communication

- ✓ Responds to complaints
- ✓ Welcomes feedback

4

Ask your doctor or scan the QR code to learn about accredited general practices and Aboriginal Medical Services.

Scan QR code →

